BADMINTON

History

Badminton has a surprisingly long history given its relatively recent introduction onto the Olympic scene. Badminton was invented long ago; its origins date back at least two thousand years to the game of battledore and shuttlecock played in ancient Greece, India and China. Badminton took its name from Badminton House in Gloucestershire, the home of the Duke of Beaufort, where the sport was played in the last century. By coincidence, Gloucestershire is now the base for the International Badminton Federation (IBF).

Founded in 1934 with nine members - Canada, Denmark, England, France, Ireland, Netherlands, New Zealand, Scotland and Wales, membership of the International Badminton Federation has risen steadily. There was a notable increase in new members after badminton's Olympic debut at Barcelona. Development in the sport continues to grow and the current 153 members is expected to increase further.

The first major IBF tournament was the Thomas Cup (world men's team championships) in 1948. Since then, the number of world events has increased with the addition of the Uber Cup (women's team), World Championships, Sudirman Cup (mixed team), World Juniors and the World Grand Prix Finals. 1996 saw the last of a highly successful invitational event, the World Cup. Started in 1981 the World Cup was established to provide top players with an opportunity to earn greater levels of prize money. As the World Grand Prix circuit has grown and prize money has increased it was felt that the World Cup had served its purpose.

On December 1, 2004 the IBF introduced sweeping changes including a move of its office away from the UK for the first time in its 70 year history to Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. Along with this dramatic change the IBF will focus on decentralizing and streamlining office functions. Badminton's $6.5 million dollar share of Olympic TV revenues will be targeted for development projects and distributed to the five Continental Confederations representing Europe, Asia, Africa, Oceania, and Pan America. As part of the refocusing of resources the IBF will begin opening official IBF Training Centers throughout the world with the first due to open in Saarbruecken, Germany in March 2005.
